Los Angeles County residents living in 24 state Assembly districts have cast their votes for who they want to represent them in Sacramento.

Early primary election results indicate slam dunks leads for several incumbents, while a few races are nail-biters and may not be settled for days or even weeks.

The top two vote-getters in the primary, regardless of party preference, will proceed to a November runoff. If there are only two candidates running, they will both automatically advance.

The L.A. County Clerk/Registrar-Recorder registered released the first round of votes, consisting of vote-by-mail ballots received before election day, shortly after polls closed at 8 p.m. Tuesday, March. 5.

Here is where the races stood as of 8:30 p.m. on Tuesday evening.
