Los Angeles-area voters headed to the polls Tuesday to replace three members of the state Assembly whose terms all ended abruptly. Here's how the early voting shaped up:

In the race for the northeastern San Fernando Valley's 39th Assembly District, Democrat Luz Rivas jumped into the lead. But it was early. To see how the race was shaping up to fill Raul Bocanegra's seat and who was in line to represent an area covering Arleta, Lake View Terrace, Mission Hills, North Hollywood, Pacoima, Sun Valley, Sunland-Tujunga, Sylmar and San Fernando, go to our website at dailynews.com.

Who will fill the remaining months of Matt Dababneh's term representing the 45th Assembly District? Democrat Jesse Gabriel and Republican Justin Clark were in a tight duel in the bid to represent the west San Fernando Valley communities of Calabasas, Hidden Hills, Canoga Park, Woodland Hills, West Hills, Winnetka, Northridge, Reseda, Tarzana and Encino and the Ventura County community of Bell Canyon.

In the 54th Assembly District, Democrat Sydney Kam- lager took a commanding lead in the race to take over from Democrat Sebastian Ridley-Thomas, who cited health problems when he resigned in December. The district includes Baldwin Hills, Century City, Crenshaw, Leimert Park, Mar Vista and West Los Angeles.
