LOS ANGELES, March 8 -- The California State Assembly Democratic Caucus issued the following news release:

In response to recent hate incidents targeting Armenian and Jewish institutions in the San Fernando Valley, Assemblymember Adrin Nazarian and Assemblymember Jesse Gabriel brought together religious and lay leaders from the Armenian and Jewish communities for an inter-community dinner and dialogue. The discussion focused on efforts to work together to combat hate and discrimination of all forms.

On January 29, 2019, hate incidents occurred at two Armenian schools in the San Fernando Valley, with Turkish flags being hung at Holy Martyrs Ferrahian Armenian School and AGBU Manoogian School. The following day, Mishkan Torah Synagogue in Tarzana was vandalized with anti-Semitic graffiti.

In welcoming the community leaders, Assemblymember Gabriel made the following remarks:

"After these disturbing incidents, Assemblymember Nazarian and I discussed how we could bring together the Jewish and Armenian communities in the Valley to combat anti-Semitism and hate of all forms. We wanted to engage with students, educators, clergy, law enforcement, and local officials so that we can all work together to defeat ignorance and bigotry."

Assemblymember Nazarian added, "History has shown time and time again that acts of hate will not frighten our communities; we will to rise to meet any obstacle, we will continue to love and prosper. I am honored to break bread with these leaders and together confront and defeat hate."

The dinner brought together members of the Jewish and Armenian communities, including:

Arpi Avanesian | Principal, AGBU Manoogian-Demirdjian School
